

They were taken to the Georgetown College, whose various apartments and adjoining grounds were shown them by some of the reverend gentlemen. After examining the study-room and chapel, they were conducted into the refectory, where a pleasant collation was served up. Among the refreshments was some domestic wine, made from the Catawba and Isabella grapes, cultivated in a vineyard in the College grounds. This is a very pleasant wine, somewhat resembling Madera in flavor, though not containing as much alcohol—Madeira having from twenty to twenty-five per cent., while this has only three or four. It is used in the communion service. The Pueblos who have large vineyards, make wine of this kind themselves. Before leaving the College, the Indians (who are Roman Catholics) were presented with a number of religious books and a few copies of the Almanac.

They then visited the Academy of the Visitation, attached to the Georgetown Convent. There they were received with much cordiality by the Sisters, and conducted through the study-rooms, the dormitories, the private music-rooms, and the painting-room, the uses of all which were explained to them, much to their admiration. The Odeon, or public music saloon, belonging to the Academy, was thrown open, and a number of

Two of these—one from Venezuela, the other from Cuba—conversed with them for some time very pleasantly in Spanish. Another sang for them several popular songs, with a piano accompaniment—all of which they seemed to appreciate most highly. Indeed, they were so greatly delighted with the reception given them by the fair entertainers, that one of them said he “would

POWER OF A SINGLE VOTE.—The Wilmington (N. C.) Herald, Whig, concedes that the Democrats will have two majority on joint ballot in the North Carolina legislature, and thus be enabled to elect a United States Senator in place of Mr.

Sons of Temperance.

We learn by telegraph that a most enthusiastic demonstration was made at Pittsburgh yesterday by the Sons of Temperance, there being present about 1,500, from all parts of the country. They marched in procession to Masonic Hall, where they

The oration was delivered by Judge McClure followed by several eloquent speakers. A platform was then adopted, disclaiming all intention of mingling in the strife of the great political parties, but expressing a determination to vote at the coming election for no State Senator or representative who does not pledge himself in favor

The enactment of a law prohibiting totally the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquors.

A resolution was also passed unanimously commending Thomas Steele, esq., for election, to the Grand Division of Pennsylvania, to the office of Grand Worthing Patnrobo.

The city presented quite a gala-day appearance, the procession being one of the most beautiful and effective ever got up in this city. The ceremonies ended by a grand banquet, attended by the beauty and fashion of the city.

Have the friends of temperance in Washington duty to perform? The elections in this city are afar off, and the popular mind is free from bias and excitement. Now is the time to lay down

The Death of "A Good Fellow!"
The Cumberland (Md.) Telegraph gives particulars of an affair which occurred a few days ago in the Glades, six miles from that place. A man named James Male (it is not said that he was drunk, but that is a matter of course!) was abusing his children, when his wife interfered, which so roused his fury that he drove the children from the house and pursued them to the woods, where he fired at them, but without wounding them. He then returned to the house and commenced reloading his gun, avowing his intention to shoot his wife, who thereupon picked up an axe, knocked him down, and killed him by blows on the throat. She was arrested, but, after a hearing, discharged from custody.
